

Reference

Morgenstierne, Georg. 1936. Iranian elements in Khowar.
Bulletin of the School of Oriental studies 8.657-71.

✓d for LUPIS

AV: BSOS 8. (1936)

= M 75

Iranian Elements in Khowar

By G. MORGENSTIERNE

KHOWAR, the predominant language of Chitral and of the adjacent parts of the Gilgit district, is characterized on the one hand by a tenacious preservation of ancient IA. sounds, forms, and words, and on the other hand by the existence of a remarkably large number of foreign elements. According to Sir George Grierson, Khowar "in some essential particulars agrees rather with the Ghalcha languages to the north".¹ And, drawing attention to the fact that the Chitral valley² was formerly inhabited by Kalashas, he expresses the opinion that the originally homogeneous Dardic population of Kafiristan, Chitral, and Gilgit "was subsequently split into two by a wedge of Khō invasion, representing members of a different, but related, tribe coming from the north [of the Hindukush]". In whatever way one may be inclined to interpret the position there can be no doubt that Kho., when compared with the neighbouring Dardic dialects, presents many peculiarities which deserve our attention.

Among the words included in the list given by Sir George³ in order to exemplify the difference between Kho. and other Dard and Kafir languages some may be of IA. origin. But it is none the less remarkable that Kho. should differ so widely from its neighbours, even as regards a number of the most common words, e.g. such as denote parts of the body. Thus, corresponding in most cases to words of IA. origin in Shina and Kalasha, Kho. has yeč 'eye', a'paq 'mouth', li'gini 'tongue', ri'giš 'beard', ča'mol 'finger', do'yūr 'nail', kram, arqa 'back', as'qūr 'lung', qhol 'bone', is'ki (q?) 'heel', is'qi 'jaw', bliq 'pupil', zānū 'knee', bāzu 'arm'. Some of these words come from Ir., others are of unknown origin.⁴

The Ir. loanwords in Kho. which form the subject of this article are very numerous. They may roughly be divided into the following groups, which, as will be seen, cannot always be clearly distinguished:

- I. Loanwords from (Modern) Pers.
- II. Loanwords from some Middle Ir. language.
- III. Loanwords from the Pamir dialects.
- IV. Loanwords from some undefinable or unknown Ir. source.

¹ LSI., viii, 2, p. 133.

² Or, at any rate, Lower Chitral.

³ Loc. cit.

⁴ Cf. also, for instance, rān 'wine', rēni 'dog', is'kim 'silk', etc.

I

The first group is by far the largest one, but also the least interesting from the linguistic point of view. Most of the Prs., or Ar.-Prs., loan-words in Kho. belong to that well-known host of "Islamic" words which has swept victoriously over half of Asia. They need not detain us here. But there are a few which present phonetic or semantic peculiarities of some sort and which call for some brief remarks.

It is noteworthy that in some words Prs. voiceless plosives have been rendered by Kho. aspirates. Thus: phōst 'skin', khūm 'palate', ba'than 'native country'.¹ A secondary aspiration appears also in some Kho. words of IA. origin, for instance in phān 'palm of the hand'. But in Badakhshi Prs. there is a tendency towards the aspiration of voiceless plosives, and it is possible that this is the reason why Kho. has chosen the aspirate in some cases. We may compare the situation in Ossetic, which possesses two series of voiceless plosives, and may employ either of them to present foreign ones.

Ba'than is remarkable also on account of its b corresponding to Prs. w. This word cannot have been borrowed before the Kho. change of v > b-, and I can find no reason why the w- was not retained, just as in waxl, wazīr, etc.

A curious form is ṣablī'kī 'a kind of horse fodder, lucerne'. It is evidently borrowed from Prs. cf. ṣaṣṭal, ṣaṣṭul 'lucerne'; but the exact form from which it is derived is unknown.² But there must be some connection between the Kho. form and 'Sanskrit' sai-pi-li-k'ie (< sak-b'ji-liśk-ka) given by Li Shi Chen.³

gurzen 'garden', which from Kho. has penetrated into Kal. and Pal., is possibly a cross between gurzēl*, gulzēr* < Prs. gulzār and Prs. gulṣan.

The "imālu",⁴ which has been assumed for the hypothetical Prs. dialect-form gulzēr*, appears also in other Kho. words. Thus we find ke'lēc (Kal. ku'l'āc) 'fathom' < Prs. qulāc, pe'lēsk 'rug' < Prs. palās, nə'wēs 'grandchild' < Prs. nawāsa, kīcb, kīep (Werchikwar kīēp, Yidgha ketiū), but also kīāb 'book' < Prs. kīāb, bēzik

¹ In phī'rān 'shirt' < Prs. pīrāhan the aspiration has been transposed. The origin of phīruāl, pīluāl 'trousers' is unknown to me. It rhymes with Prs. ṣarūāl < ṣulwār.

² Palola (Dardic dial. in Chitral) ṣabṛīkī probably comes from Kho. Another kind of lucerne is called ṣau'thāl in Pal., ṣau'tal in Gawar-Bati, and ṣar'thal in Kalasha.

³ Vide Laufer, Sino-Iranica, p. 214.

⁴ Cf. Horn, Gr. Ir. Ph., i, 2, 33.

(O'Brien) 'powder horn' < Prs. šax(ak). Cf. also Munji rikēb 'stirrup' < Prs. rikēb = rikāb.

Kho. niwēšik 'to write' agrees with the common E. Prs. form which has introduced the š of the preterite into the present stem. But I am unable to trace the exact source of such forms as riwiš 'rhubarb': Prs. rīwās, Psht. rawāš; naxoi 'pea': Prs. nuxūd; yalwanj 'kite': Prs. yalēwāš, etc.; angdh 'awake': Prs. āgāh 'aware'; yuzār 'footstep, trace': Prs. guḏār 'passage'. krenj (Kal. krīn) 'wrinkle' corresponds to Prs. gurinj, but a k is attested in Bal. kirišk, Kurd. kurišk < kurińk*.

A further form peculiar to Kho. (and the adjoining Werchikwar) is tu'vek 'gun, musket': Prs. tufang, tufak.¹

Finally it may be mentioned that Kho. has borrowed from Prs. a few words which I have not come across in any of the neighbouring languages. Thus, e.g.: gudāz 'trouble, grief' and iškālī 'excuse', probably from Prs. šikāl 'cunning, deceit', cf. šikālīš 'care, rogues'.

Iškālī also exemplifies the tendency to render Prs. si-, su- + a consonant by Kho. is-. Thus: iske'na 'awl', iškama 'belly', išpēl 'whistling',² istōr 'horse', istiyān 'sprouts' (Psht. tēyāna), if from Prs. sičy 'straight'. The same tendency prevails in the development of IA. words in Kho. and it is impossible to decide whether the initial ist-, etc., in the loanwords is of Kho. or of dialectical Prs. origin.

As regards istōr it is possible that it has not been borrowed from Modern Prs., where the word is hardly ever used, but from middle Ir., cf. e.g. N.W. Turfan Phl. stwr.

This leads us on to the next group of loanwords.

II

In an earlier publication³ I have tried to show that Kho. contains a number of other "Middle-Ir." loanwords. It is, however, impossible to draw a clear line between words of Middle E.Ir. origin and such as may have been borrowed from one of the Pamir dialects at an earlier stage of development. But, at any rate, some of the Kho. words of ¹ The distribution of the words for 'gun': milliq, bandūq, and the various forms assumed by tufang in Ir. and IA. would require a special study. Here it suffices to note that tufak must have come from the north-west. The Dard dialects of the Kunar valley have forms borrowed through Psht. lilpāk. Most Pamir dialects (and Ormuri) have the Turki word milliq, or they employ the old local word for 'bow' with a new meaning.

² But Kal. šipēz 'whistling'; išpēzi, Kati špā 'flute' are genuine.

³ Report on a linguistic mission to Afghanistan, p. 76 f.

"Middle-Ir." appearance probably come from a language of civilization and not from a neighbouring local dialect.

Among the most important of the words dealt with are harēn 'mirror' < ādhēn*; čazur 'spinning-wheel': Sogd. čazr 'wheel', etc.; nimēž (Kati namoč) 'prayer': Phl. namāč, Kurd. nimēž, etc.; žār 'poison': N.W. Phl. žahr, Kurd. žār; *duvarth*¹ 'door': Old Pers. duvarθi- 'portico'; yrānu 'pregnant'²: Sogd. yrān 'heavy'. Also xatan 'house, room' must be an early loanword from Ir., cf. Gabri xada 'house', and Slav. xata 'hut' which is probably also borrowed from Ir.³

On the other hand, it is very doubtful if čhat, čat (Kal. čhut) 'lake' can have been borrowed from Ir. (Av. čāt- 'well'), as suggested loc. cit.

But there are some other words which are certainly of early (W. or E.) Ir. origin. Thus we find ro'či 'a fast': Prs. rōza, Pehl. rōzu, Brahui loanword rōča; aniž 'forehead': cf. Bal. anišay < ānišaka*; čat'ir 'tent' (borr. from Kho. into Kal. and Yd.): Prs. čādar, -ir; girva'lōy 'peach' from an earlier form of Prs. gurdālū with substitution of rw for rδ*⁴; -žeri (in puši-žeri 'kitten') < čīθriya-*, cf. Av. aži-čīθra-, vəhrkō-ē 'descended from a snake, a wolf'; taparzing 'battle-axe': Prs. tabar-zin(g), Wkh. tapār, etc.; božik* 'to play (chess, etc.)'⁵: Prs. bāzam, bāxtan; γōn 'like, resembling': Sogd. γōn 'manner, kind', cf. Pashai gōni 'like', Hürkin (N.E. Caucasian) γuna 'like'. Also the interesting word 'drozum 'silver' must have passed through Middle Ir. on its way from Greek to Kho.

It is also tempting to derive Kho. pax'turi 'the sunny side of a valley or a hill' from Av., Phl. apāxtar(a-) 'northern' with u from unstressed a (cf. asur 'he is' < āsati*) and a secondary suffix. In Upper Chitral the earliest known home of the Khōs, the sunny side of the valley would be the north-western, in Mastuj the northern one.

¹ Kal. durmoč, durgač may be adaptations of the Kho. word.

² It is noteworthy that the native IA. word gar'č'is is used about animals, while the foreign and nobler one is reserved for human beings.

³ This derivation is rejected by Meillet (BSL., 28, p. 133), who does not, of course, know the Kho. and Gabri forms. It is not necessary to assume, with Jokl (WuS., 12, p. 86) that xata has passed through an Ugrian language with x < t. Cf. also Yidgha-Munji zeyo 'wall'.

⁴ Vide NTS., 5, p. 40.

⁵ Ir. δ becomes r in Kho. But in the group rδ* this treatment was excluded.

⁶ Prs. 1 pl. bāšiat, pret. 3 pl. bōžitani, etc. A different word is božik 'to divide' of IA. origin.

A much more doubtful case is tozmiran which O'Brien and also my Kalasha informant give as the Kho word for daughter-in-law. It has a decidedly Ir. appearance, and one could easily imagine a Middle Ir. tōxmē-dān* denoting the daughter-in-law as the continuer of the family lineage, the "receptaculum seminis".

But Colonel Lorimer, who has kindly undertaken to ascertain the exact meaning of the word for me in Gilgit, informs me that it does not mean daughter-in-law, but "is a term used of two sets of parents-in-law vis-à-vis each other, and is used by them as a term of address to each other". This seems to upset the otherwise plausible derivation of tozmiran.

It is perhaps conceivable that the meaning given by Lorimer is, after all, a secondary one. If the word did originally denote the daughter-in-law, it may have got its sphere of meaning extended so as to include her parents, and subsequently have lost its primary signification and have been restricted to its present use.

We do not know from which Middle Ir. dialect or dialects Kho. may have borrowed. There exists, however, possibly one indication regarding the source of some of the words mentioned above. The Kalasha name for the Khōs is Pātu, which can be derived from Pārlaw* and may originally have been applied to a group of Parthians who found their way to Chitral and established their rule among the native tribes of the country.

III

From early times down to the present day the inhabitants of Chitral have been in constant and close contact with the Ir. tribes to the north and west, and their dialects have been influenced by Kho. This is especially the case with Yidgha, which has been spoken in Chitral for many generations. But Wakhi also, although being separated from Chitral¹ by a high range of mountains, has submitted to the influence of Kho. to the extent of borrowing even some personal pronouns from this language.²

But Kho., on its side, has not been averse to adopting a number of words from these numerically and culturally unimportant Ir. border tribes. We do not know how the process of borrowing has taken place, but we must remember that the circumstances favour an extensive linguistic exchange. Small groups of settlers are constantly emigrating from one valley to another, peasants cross the passes to trade in the nearest bazaar or in search of temporary employment as labourers, shepherds meet in a friendly or unfriendly way on the grazing grounds in the mountains. The village communities are small, and the local dialects have no great prestige. The result is a lack of backbone, a linguistic lability which offers little resistance towards the introduction of foreign elements.

¹ The existence of recent Wakhi settlers in the Yarkhun valley does not alter the situation in this respect.

² Cf. Rep. Afgh., p. 79.

But, even so, it is remarkable that Kho. should have borrowed from Wakhi, or from an earlier form of that language, some of the most common words.¹ Thus we find:—

- ✓ Kho. do'yūr 'finger-nail' < Wkh. dəger, də'yər, etc. < n(a)g*- (cf. Capus' Wkh. 'hindiger') < nak*- with Wkh. k < x.
 - ✓ Kho. ri'giš 'beard' < Wkh. regiš, re'yīš < fra-gaiša*- (acc. to Sköld).
 - ✓ Kho. išprū 'fruit-blossom' < sprūy*: Wkh. spray, sprəy. Cf. also Kho. iš'prenžik, išprenžik 'to blossom' < Ir. sprenja(ya)*-, cf. Sogd. 'spr-y- 'to blossom', Sak. haspaljs- (caus.).
 - ✓ Kho. išprāsk, išprāzg 'ceiling' < spārsk* (?), Wkh. si'pask, Shgh. s'pāšc 'rafter'.
 - ✓ Kho. sonthu 'raven' < Wkh. āōnd, cf. Oss. sumt.
 - ✓ Kho. pāz 'breast' < Wkh. pāz, Sar. puz, etc.
 - ✓ Kho. rozni 'embers' < Wkh. razni(g) 'fire'.
 - ✓ Kho. yarik, yerik 'to turn (into)', etc. < Wkh. yir- 'to turn round'.
 - ✓ Kho. pot 'polo-ball' < Wkh. tup 'playing ball'.
 - ✓ Kho. sa'puk 'hoof' (Werch. aapa). Wkh. has the Prs. loanword sum, but there may have existed an earlier genuine Wkh. form with the characteristic Wkh. change of f > p (cf. Av. safa-).
 - ✓ Kho. wāru 'rain', zomēik 'to yawn', sarēik 'to appear, seem' correspond to Wkh. wūr zim 'yawn'; sūdüy- 'to appear', but these words may have been borrowed by Kho. from some other Ir. dialect (cf. Oss. zāmbjn 'to yawn').
- And in the case of Kho. zēl (Kal. khel) 'perspiration', an'dāu 'fever', wāy 'price, money': Wkh. zāl, andav, way, which can scarcely be genuine Wkh. forms, it is equally possible that both languages have borrowed from a common Ir. source. Nor is it certain that Wkh. kiržepā, kižipēi 'magpie' is the form from which Kho. kišipi has been borrowed. Cf. Shgh. kižepc, Werchikwar yašep, etc.

¹ Cf. Report on a linguistic mission to Afghanistan, p. 76.

The following words, which are common to Kho. and Wkh., have an Ir. appearance, but they have not been traced in any other Ir. language and their origin is therefore uncertain: Kho. u'zār: Wkh. wa'zār 'ladder'; Kho. biz'bār 'eagle, kite': Wkh. bispūr (biz* (?) + par ?); Kho. ṣaw'gūr (Kal. ṣāngr'ūr'i) 'guts, entrails': Wkh. ṣəngar; Kho. jox, zox 'thorn, bramble': Wkh. zax, zax̌.

On the other hand, the vocalism and also the isolated position of the Wkh. word render it probable that Wkh. tūrt 'ford' is borrowed from Kho. thūrt. Kho. našk 'beak' corresponds to Wkh. nüčk, Sar. nüsk, but can scarcely be separated from Gawar-Bati našuk, Dameli naš, Pashai nošuk, nāšuk.

It is surprising that Kho. should have borrowed any words from Yidgha, the dialect of a small and unimportant border-community. Yet this seems to be the case, although the situation is considerably obscured by the circumstance that Yd. has evidently borrowed many words of Ir. origin from Kho., and it is often difficult to distinguish such words from those which may have been adopted into Kho. from Yd.

The following are the most probable examples of Kho. borrowing from Yd., or an older form of that dialect:—

- ✓ Kho. ha'dām 'limb, body': Yd. hadamē < Av. handāman-, with regular change of nd < d. h- appears in Yd. without any regard to etymology.
- ✓ Kho. yēik, yēm 'to spin': Yd. yūm, with regular loss of intervocalic u/w. Cf. Munji yūm, Wkh. žūp, Sgl. yūw, yēv < yaip*.
- ✓ Kho. wraznī (also Pal.) 'pillow': Yd. virzanē < varznai* < barznika-*. But Kho. warzidīni 'holster' < varz(d)nī* is an earlier loanword and is probably in its turn the source of Yd. vrazi'dinē.
- ✓ Kho. zu'rī 'wild rose': Yd. axrīo < ā-zaritū-* (?), cf. Pra. xār, etc. Kho. pežemik 'to entrust': Yd. pižam-, Munji pažōn- < pati-šamaya-*.
- ✓ Kho. šūnf 'needle': Yd. šinjo, šunjo < šūžno*, cf. Mj. šižno. The Kho. word can scarcely be connected with Kal. suš, sužik, etc.
- ✓ Kho. frōš 'muzzle, lip of an animal': Yd. frušē < Av. fraša- 'forwards' + -ka-. It is not certain that the Kho. word is borrowed from Yd.
- ✓ Kho. drēik 'to pour out, sow, throw, shave': Yd. drī- with the same varieties of meaning. The word is also found in Munji and must be Ir. (han-drāwaya-* ?).

- ↓ Kho. vren/ġik 'to fry': Yd. vroč- (for -vro- < urin-* ?). Cf. Bal. briġag.
- ↓ Kho. ju-sara 'a period of two years'. Only given by a Yidgha as the translation of his own loh-sara. If correct sara* < sario* may be connected with Ir. sak- to pass the time, vide Alphab. List, s.v. soxč-.
- ↓ Kho. trišpōy 'dandelion': cf. Yd. trišp 'sour'.
- ↓ Kho. ro'mēn (O'Brien ro'mēnhū) 'aspen': Yd. ra'meno. Also in Mj. and therefore scarcely of Kho. origin.
- ↓ Kho. uštirik 'to flee, run, jump': Yd. ustuš- 'to jump'. Apparently the original Yd. present stem was ustur-, ustur-, or uštur-*, ustuš- being the ancient past stem.
- ↓ Kho. au'zēu 'heifer (two years old)': Probably < early Yd. avzēθo* < abi-* (or upa-*)-zqθyā-; cf. vəzāxō 'pregnant animal' < upa-* (?) zqθyā-, pəzčē 'male sheep one to two years old' < patizqθyaka-*.
- ↓ Kho. cəraz 'spark' corresponds to Yd. cəraz, but similar forms are found also in other Ir. languages. Yd. γernānu 'whirlpool, eddy' is borrowed from Kho. γernānu, γerdānu (Kal. ger'dhan fr. Kho.), in its turn a loanword from Ir., cf. Prs. girdāb, Sgl. γərdāv and especially Waziri Pəht. γrīmbai < γartāna-* ?

The nature of the relationship between Kho. iwīs 'bridle', ġirġik 'to lament, cry', sayūrġ 'large hawk',¹ wāy 'price', and Yd. yurwiz, ġirġy, šayūrš, *hūy*² is unknown. Kho. trušni 'thirsty' is probably a loanword from Ir., but Yd. *trušnē*³ is borrowed from, and not the source of, the Kho. word. I do not know whether Kho. trešna'yuli 'thyme' is of Ir. origin. Also Yd. tanou 'rope' (Biddulph) is probably borrowed from Kho. tanau < Ir., cf. Prs. tanūdan 'to twist'.

Finally we may mention that Kho. nəl 'rushes' is derived from Skr. naḍa- and not borrowed from Munji nəl.

The third Ir. Pamir language bordering upon Chitral is Sanglicheh-Ishkashmi. The strongest evidence of its influence upon Kho. is Kho. wārz 'above': Sgl. vəzāz (< varz-* < barz-*). Kho. u'sanu 'whetstone', dumik 'to card wool', γərdik 'to turn round' remind us of Sgl. vəsin (< arasān*), dəmb-, γort- 'to walk about' (early loanword from Phl.). But it is by no means certain that the Kho. words

¹ Palula loanword sayūrš.

² Cf. above, p. 602.

³ Also Yd. tīšno, etc., of Prs. origin.

Bal.

zha as

saxw-

phab.

Iso in

rently

istur-

wzēθo

il' <

old'

is are

-lpool,

-dhan

, Sgl.

iryēik

uwiz,

bably

at the a'yuli

bably

from lechi-

io. is

'sanu

nd us

loan-

words

come from Sgl. Cf. e.g. Yd. afseno, Prs. afsān 'whetstone'; Yd. lib- < dumb-* 'to card', etc.

If Kho. a'draz 'hillside, forest' is connected with Ishk. alaz, dīaz 'hill' (< ardaza-*) the borrowing must have taken place at an early date. Kal adrakh, Pal. adrax 'hillside' may easily be loanwords from Kho., from which these languages have borrowed very freely.

Kho. ēid'in 'brass kettle' (> Kal. ēi'dhin) recalls Ishk. ēudan; but both words are probably of Prs. origin, cf. ēaudan, ēū 'cast metal'. ēi'dān 'kettle' is found also in Yazghulami. Finally may be mentioned the very remote possibility of the curious Kho. word γō'fī 'hare' having been borrowed from a lost (or not recorded) Sgl. γō'fī* < gauṣiya-* ' (long-) eared '. But what about Kal. g'āva'riak, gāva'riak 'hare'?

IV

While the Dardic languages south of Kho. contain a number of loanwords from Psht., such words are extremely rare in Kho. It is not till quite recently that the two languages have come into contact, Kho. expanding towards the south and Psht. towards the north in the Kunar valley and Dir.

But there are many words in Kho. which have a general E.Ir. appearance, or which agree more or less with forms found in several Pamir dialects. Such words will be found in the following Alphabetical List (cf. s.vv. copik, lašt, menū, murūlūm, pālūm, rošt, soxēik, ṣā, ṣapik, wōr, werkhū, wrazun, xāl, (a) xomik, xora, zāy, zērc) which includes also, for the sake of reference, all the words mentioned above, and a number of doubtful loanwords, or such as could not easily be fitted into the groups dealt with above. There are many other Kho. words which contain un-Indian sounds, but which have not been found either in Iranian, Turkish, or Burushaski. But there is always the possibility of new words having been created within Kho. itself at a time when foreign sounds had already been adopted into the phonetic system of the language. Cf. e.g. γof 'dumb' and daq 'boy', which at the same time contain cerebrals and the un-Indian sounds γ and q. In Psht. and Bal. words of a similar mixed type are quite numerous.

At any rate, I hope that the list, in spite of its shortcomings and its inconclusiveness, may give some impression of the extent to which Kho. has been subject to Ir. influence, and that other scholars may be able to trace the source and history of many words which I have had to leave unexplained. I need not add that my Kho. material is by no means exhaustive.

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF IRANIAN WORDS IN KHOWAR

√ ārā'rōy 'eructation'. With a kind of reduplication from Prs. ārōy? Yd. ara'rōy is borrowed from Kho.

√ aniš 'forehead', v. p. 660.

√ andāu 'fever', v. p. 662.

√ angā(h) 'awake', v. p. 659.

√ anzēik 'to send', < Ir. han-zaya*-, cf. Av. zā(y)- 'mittere'?

√ anzōrt (Lor.) 'waste, desolate'. Of Ir. appearance, but without any known connection. Sgl. zenz:- zūyθ 'to lift, seize', etc., cannot be compared.

√ is'kīm 'silk', v. p. 657.

√ is'kena 'awl', v. p. 659.

√ u'sanu 'whetstone', v. p. 664.

√ viskūrdi 'short'. Cf. Kurd. kūrd (v. Bartholomae ZDMG., 50, 702)?

√ isprū 'blossom', ispru'fik, išp° 'to blossom', v. p. 662.

√ isprūšk 'ceiling', v. p. 662.

√ as'gār 'lungs', cf. Prs. šaxār.

√ istāri 'star'. Prob. IA., cf. Ashkun is'ta, etc.

√ istōr 'horse', v. p. 659.

√ iskāli 'excuse', v. p. 659.

√ iskama 'belly' v. p. 659.

√ ismārēik 'to count'.

√ išpēl 'whistling', v. p. 659.

√ uštūrik 'to flee, spring' v. p. 664.

√ aurik, aurik 'to ride'. Cf. Av. bar-, Yaghn. voršāki 'to ride'.

√ iwēs 'bridle', v. p. 664.

√ u'rār 'ladder', v. p. 663.

√ a'xrānu 'stable', < āxur-šān*-?

√ dyukun 'egg', < ā(w)yak*, cf. Prs. zāya, etc. But un?

√ au'zetu 'heifer', v. p. 664.

√ bo'yāzu 'frog'. Cf. Prs. baray, ra°, etc., Av. vazaya-. With transposition, cf. Munji wuyzaya.

√ brōnsk, bron 'meadow', Kal. brunz, Pak. brhūnz, Dam. brds. Poss.

< mranz* < Ir. marza*-. But Av. marza- 'border country'.

√ bōšk 'thick'. Cf. Wkh. bāf, Sgl. vozōk, etc.?

√ bašūy, bās 'stream divided into many rivulets'. Yd. (yānyo) bašīyo id.

√ bu'than 'country', v. p. 658.

√ biz'bār 'eagle', v. p. 663.

*božik

copik

coraz

čōik, č

čičhā

čūrice

I

I

čhat

čā'tir

čazur

do'yū

dumi

drēik

droz

draz

dura

frosk

frōs

frižēi

gu'dā

giruc

guruc

yēik

yōū

yūl

yālii

yālu

yōlī

yān

yōn

yārik

yāri

yruc

is by ārōy?

thout
etc.,

2) ?

rans-

Poss.
y'.

yo id.

✓ *božik 'to play', v. p. 660.

✓ copik 'to gather, pick': Wkh. čūp-, Sar. cev-, Yd. čūv-.

✓ coraz 'spark', v. p. 664.

✓ čōik, čhōik 'to be frozen'. Pres. *č(h)āiman. Prob. from Pres. čā(h)īdan 'to feel cold', cf. Munji čīy-.

✓ čī'dhūn 'brass pot', v. p. 665.

✓ čārūclu 'headman of several villages', čārbū 'village headman':
Pres. čārbū 'fatness' (cf. Oss. čāsīj-soi 'the fat of the land, a prominent man').

✓ čhat 'lake', v. p. 660.

čā'tīr 'tent', v. p. 660.

čaxur 'spinning wheel', v. p. 660.

čō'yūr 'finger nail', v. p. 662.

čumik 'to card wool', v. p. 664.

drčik 'to pour out', etc., v. p. 663.

drozum 'silver', v. p. 660.

drazčik 'to load up' (> Kal. of Urtsun drāz-). Ir. darz- 'to wrap up, to load', cf. Sar. šerz- 'to load' and Et. Voc. Psht. a.v. lēžai.

duncarth 'door', v. p. 660.

frosk 'right, true'. Ir. ?

frāš 'muzzle', v. p. 663.

frižčik 'to sniff'. Cf. Wkh. ferz- 'to sneeze'?

gu'dāz 'trouble', v. p. 659.

girwalōy 'peach', v. p. 660.

gurzen 'garden', v. p. 658.

yčik 'to spin', v. p. 663.

yčū 'leather'. Ir. ? But cf. Gawar-Bati guci, Dam. gōči, Waig. guči, Kal. (Leitner) gao.

yāl 'polo' (Kal. gāl). Pres. yāl 'rolling', yālūk 'playing ball'. Dialect form < *gart-?

yalčik 'to curl'. Pres. yulāla 'curls', but no corresponding verb.

yalwanj 'kite', v. p. 659.

yōlī 'hare', v. p. 665.

yān 'wooden trough', Ir. ?

yōn 'like', v. p. 660.

yarik 'to turn (into)', v. p. 662.

yāri 'upland pasture'. Av. gairi- 'mountain', etc. ?

yruc 'a bunch of grapes'. Prob. IA. in spite of the γ-. Cf. Gawar-Bati urūs, Pal. grūc, Dam. gu'rus, g'ruc, Psht. of Dir gurūr 'strawberry'. Kal. ruc 'bunch of grapes' < Kho.

- yardik* 'to turn round', v. p. 664. yrānu 'pregnant', v. p. 660.
yer'nānu 'eddy', v. p. 664.
yuzār 'footsteps', v. p. 659.
ha'dām 'limbs, body', v. p. 663.
ha'rēn 'mirror', v. p. 660.
horsk 'straight, true' (Dam. ōska 'truth') < Ir. urzk*, cf. Yd. urzu, etc. Kal. 'ūfuk is IA.
ke'leē 'fathom', v. p. 658.
krenj 'wrinkle', v. p. 659.
kar'vas 'cotton' (Kal. kra'vas). Borrowed from Prs. karvās, uās* (in its turn from Ind.), and again borrowed from Kho. into Yd. kušk(omūl) 'armpit'. Cf. Prs. kaš? kišipi 'magpie', v. p. 662.
kilep 'book', v. p. 658.
ko'vōr 'pigeon'. Prob. IA., cf. Kal. ko'hōl (Kal. u. ko'hōr). But Waig. kupta, Gawar-Bati kōpota are perhaps early Ir. loanwords.
khām 'palate', v. p. 658.
khon'gor 'sword': Prs. azangal, Sogd. znyr, Yd. xu'gor, Ar. xanjar (< Prs.). lašt 'plain, steppe', Kal. lhašt, Pal. l'hāšt 'plain, flat'. From an Ir. l- dialect, cf. Prs. dašt?
me'nū 'guest'. < mēm-*, cf. Prs. mihmān, etc.? muryulūm 'down of birds', 'wool of ibex'. Wkh. margilam 'gout's wool'.
ninēž 'prayer', v. p. 660.
našk 'beak', v. p. 663. našk?
na'wes 'grandchild', v. p. 658.
nivēšik 'to write', v. p. 659.
nazai 'pea', v. p. 659.
pālum (Kal. pāl'im) 'soft, smooth'. Wkh. pal(a)m 'soft, smooth, fine powder', Yd. polam 'soft, smooth, fine', Sgl. pādm. Also Prs. palm 'dust' from an l- dialect?
pe'lēsk 'rug', v. p. 658. Cf. Shughni pa'lās. pulunguštū 'finger-ring'. Wkh. plōngōšt, but Yd. parguččē (< paran-guštī*). Not found in Prs. pošp 'wool'. Probably an early loanword from Ir. pašm. Found in most Dardic dialects; Kal. paš, Bashk. pam, Gawar-Bati pōm, etc. pot 'polo ball', v. p. 662.
paxturi 'sunny side', v. p. 660.

pāz 'breast', v. p. 662.

pečemik 'to entrust', v. p. 663.

phī'rān 'shirt', v. p. 658.

phirwāl 'trousers', v. p. 658.

phōst 'skin', v. p. 658.

roči 'fast', v. p. 660.

ri'giš 'beard', v. p. 662.

rūm 'tail'. Acc. to Turner (Nep. Dict., s.v. dumsā) early loanword from Prs. In that case the only Kho. word with r- < Ir. ḍ-. The long ū would be difficult to explain. Probably IA. = Skr. lūma-.

ro'men 'aspens', v. p. 664.

ronzik, ranzuman 'to shiver' (Kal. ronz-, Dam. rāz-). Probably Ir. ranz- < ra-rz-*, cf. Prs. larzīdan, Psht. rēždēdēl, etc. Welsh Gypsy rizer- < rirz-*?

rošt 'daylight'. Wkh. rošt 'day', Sgl. rašt 'dawn'.

riwiš 'rhubarb', v. p. 659.

roxek 'to leave behind'. Ir.?

roxnī 'embers', v. p. 662.

sa'puk 'hoof', v. p. 662.

sor 'head'. The o indicates a rather early borrowing. Yd. soro 'ear of corn' from Kho. sarēik 'to appear', v. p. 662.

srūng 'horn'. Cross between śring* (< śṛugā-) and Av. srū-? The modern Pamir dialects all have š < sr, for instance Yd. šū.

-sara, v. p. 664.

sauzēik 'to sew, prepare'. Ir.?

sa'yūrj 'hawk', v. p. 664.

šūnš 'needle', v. p. 663.

šinšūr 'jujube-tree'. Prs. sinšid Yd. sazīyo, Munji sišid. Anc. loanword from Ir. (with s-š > š-š) or vice versa?

šēxē (O'Brien) 'stumbling'. Cf. Prs. šazīdan, Yd. s'zuy- 'to stumble'.

šērik 'horn', v. p. 658.

šozčik, šazčumān, šozs- (O'Brien, Ganj-i-Pukhto) 'to pass, cross a pass, to forgive', in the G.-i.-P. 'to pass' (about the time). Kal. šazsim from Kho., Sgl. šazs-, Wkh. šōzs- 'to pass'. Probably < saxša-* from Ir. sak- 'to pass (the time)'.

šū 'black'. Wkh. šū Sgl. šūi. Ir.?

šablīki 'lucerne', v. p. 658.

rsuy,

°wās
Yd.

Vaig.

hujar

an an oat's

both,
Also

tran-

ed in
, etc.

paŋgūr 'guts', v. p. 663.

paŋthu 'raven', v. p. 662.

pa'pik 'bread'. Wkh. xapik, Shgh. šapik, etc., v. Rep. Lingu. Miss. Afgh., p. 77.

tanau 'rope', v. p. 664.

tonk 'shallow': Prs. tunuk, etc. Also Kho. tonuk 'thin, delicate', etc.

ta'pūr-zīng 'battle-axe', v. p. 660.

truš'ni 'thirsty', v. p. 664.

trispōy 'dandelion', v. p. 664.

tu'vek 'gun', v. p. 659.

tozmiran 'daughter-in-law' (??), v. p. 661.

wā 'again, Prs. bāz'. Prs. wā is used only as a verbal prefix.

we- 'without' < Ir. (a)βē-*, Prs. bē. we-tatu 'fatherless'; we-xāl 'tasteless', wē-soru 'widow'.

wāy 'price', v. pp. 662, 664.

wāru 'rain', v. p. 662.

wōr 'smell' (> Pal. ōr). < βōδ*, cf. Wkh. wāl, Werchikw. loan-word vēri.

werkhū 'lamb'; werkhālu 'ram, three years old'. Scarcely borrowed from Ir., Wkh. würk, etc.

warūm 'felt, numda'; warānk 'posteen'; ša waruni 'siāh-pōš'. Ir. ?

wrenšēik 'to fry', v. p. 664.

wārz 'above', v. p. 664.

warzidīni 'bolster', v. p. 663.

wraznī 'pillow', v. p. 663.

wrazun 'wing' (Kal. bazūr-guṇḍi); warāznēn lo (Kal. wrazan-lōu) 'flying squirrel'; postwrazun, poz'wūzur, postw° (Kal. pōzwrazun) 'bat'. Cf. Yd. wārzeyo, Munji vozargo, Psht. wazar, etc.

we-soru 'widow' (> Yd. wūsarwo). Ir. βē-sar* 'headless', cf. Kal. a-šīša 'widow, bē-sar'.

wezen 'evening' < uz-ayana-*, cf. Av. uzayara-, uzaycirina-, Yd. izianē.

'zacum 'owner'. Ir. ??

xāl (Kul. khal, Yd. xāl from Kho.) 'taste'. < Ir. xwāl* < xwāδ, Prs. xiwāl.

xēl 'sweat', v. p. 662 (Pash. of Kurangal hē'le from Psht.).

xomik, axomik, xuamik 'to descend'. Wkh. šam-, cf. Sar. šāvs-, Yd. zafs-, Prs. xambānīdan 'to bend', etc.

xēr 'stench'. Ir. ?

zora 'mill'. Cf. Sgl. xudāri. Yd. xīryo, etc.

- lingu. Miss.
licate', etc.
x.
s'; we-xāl
ukw. loan-
y borrowed
-pōš'. Ir. ?
orazan-lōu) pōzwrazan)
, cf. Kal.
rina-, Yd.
il < xwūd,
Sar. zāus-, xūr 'other'. Ir. ?
xu'rī 'wild rose', v. p. 663.
xēšēik 'to entreat'. Ir. ? xāk 'soft'. Ir. ?
xošp 'dream'. Prs. xusp 'asleep'. But š ?
xalan 'house', v. p. 660.
xausik, xowsik 'to request'. Ir., cf. Arm. xawsim 'I say' ? ?
xu'sūn 'happy' (Kal. x'šān, Dam. kho'sān, Bashgali kušān from Kho.).
Cf. Sogd. *xwāšant ('xwāš'nt) ? Or Prs. xušnān ? xo'yānu 'belly'. Ir. ?
raž'gūm 'carrot', Kati (Chitral) gaž'gūm. *gaʃ(a)k(+ ūm) of IA. origin, but perhaps influenced in the ending by Sgl., Prs. šalyām 'turnip'.
yōrmān 'woe, armān' (in poetic formula). Early loanword from Prs.
ērmān with Kho. ē- > yo- (cf. yo'mun 'winter').
yūrān Bidd., yurān O'Brien 'year', yewān Bidd. 'solstice'.
Connection with Av. yār- 'year' is very improbable.
yozun(u) 'yoke'. < Middle Ir. *yōzan = Skr. yojana- ? zōik 'to agree to'. Ir. ? zāy 'fat, grease'. Yazghulami zēy 'liquid fat', Psht. yōz 'fat of the kidneys' (and Oss. qa(n)z 'marrow' ?).
zo'mēik 'to yawn', v. p. 662.
zāru 'old'. Prs. zar 'old man', Yd. zōr. zērē 'yellow'. Ir. *zērt + ē, cf. Seistani zercā or zardī 'rust disease of wheat'. Shgh. zerec 'rust'. Kho. zērbālī 'yellow rose' < *zērd-wālī ?
žār 'poison', v. p. 660.
-žeri 'young animal', v. p. 660.
žiryēik 'to lament', v. p. 664.¹

¹ Also the other Dardic languages contain some early Ir. loanwords. I have mentioned Shina, etc., gušpūr 'prince', Rep., p. 76. Others are e.g. Kal. parēc (Dam. pavēdi) 'sieve': Parachi paricōn; Kal. sa'rēu, 'ēlas 'small flat basket', sohōla 'big, deep basket' < *sapal: Prs. sapad, etc.; zhāntynk 'child-bearing': Av. zāthya-; Gawar-Bari zātak, Bashkarik fātak 'boy(s)': Phl. zātak; Dameli rōpnk 'fox' (or IA ?); Ashkun buis'mi 'almond': Prs. būlām, etc.; Palola būlīgala 'tomato, egg-plant', Kohistani Shina bhatīngar: Prs. badiīngān < IA. (through Ir. ?).